

We watched in horror and disbelief on Wednesday as domestic terrorists assaulted our Capitol and our democracy. We strongly condemn their actions. This was a stain on our country, but a stain that we will overcome. We can and must be better than this. As proof, look no further than the other night. Hours after the Capitol was occupied by a mob, the House of Representatives and Senate reconvened and carried out the business of the Republic by certifying the fair and accurate results of November's election. This should serve as another lesson to those who desire to take down our democracy. You will fail! Our country was strong before and it remains strong today as we resume our lives. For that, we are thankful.
